

CHILDREN PLAY TO LEARN

The Important of PLAY

It is important to understand that a child's work is their play, it is very meaningful and it is very important to their growth and development. Children learn by reenacting their experiences, to make sense of the world around them. By creating their own experiences children can understand how things work and the purpose/significance of objects and activities they encounter daily (Mooney, 2013).

Play allows children to create meaning for the world around them

Children learn according to their interest & environment (Dewey, 2013)

Play encourages children to defy limitations and explore the unknown

Experiences develop the basic foundation of the brain

Through play, children reenact their understanding of the world

Children play to determine their place in the adult world, as they attempt to understand it!
